ARREST OFFICIALS AFTER UNION BANK FAILURE

PROMINENT PEOPLE INVOLVED IN CRASH INVESTIGATORS SAY

Further Arrests Are Expected—Two Are Now In Custody

ST. LOUIS, Mo., June 2.—A number of prominent persons may be involved in the failure of the Union Savings Bank of Yorkville in connection with which, Thomas S. Jones, vice president and his brother, W. E. Jones, cashier, have been arrested, officials of the state banking department declared today.

Further arrests are imminent, according to County Prosecutor Roy N. Merryman, who ordered the Jones brothers taken into custody. Thomas Jones, who resides here, has been liberated under $30,000 bond and his brother, living in Martin's Ferry has been released under $40,000 bond.

Thomas Jones faces three charges, according to Merryman. First, that on January 4, 1925, he forged a promissory note for $5,500; second, that he misappropriated the money secured through the alleged false note; third, that he unlawfully abstracted from the bank, a $50,000 certificate of deposit in favor of Thomas W. Jones, and John G. Belknap, upon which he secured $50,000 from the Guardian Trust Co., of Cleveland and deposited the account to the credit of Thomas E. Jones. W. E. Jones also faces this charge.

Belknap is a former probate judge and Francis an ex-congressman. W. E. Jones, also faces charges of making false entries, misapplying funds and publishing a false financial statement.

When the bank was taken over by the state banking department a $305,000 loan to West Virginia Coal interests was said to have caused the crash.

LONG SHOT WINNER OF ENGLISH DERBY; FAVORITE IS THIRD

Coronach Takes Classic From Colorado and Lance Gaye

EPSOM DOWNS, Eng., June 2.—Lord Woolavington's Coronach today won the derby.

William Singer, Lance Gaye, was second and Colorado, owned by the Earl of Derby, the favorite with about $10,000,000 of the public's money, on him was third.

Nineteen horses ran.

The betting was eleven to two on Coronach, forty to one on Lance Gaye, 2 to 1 on Colorado.

Just before the race, betting was 7 to 4 against Colorado and 100 to 14 against Coronach.

Lord Woolavington saw his second derby winner come down the stretch today. In 1922 his Lordship achieved his first derby victory with Captain Cuttle, Steve Donoghue up. But this famous distiller who is chairman of Messrs. John Buchanan and Company makers of the famous Whiskey, had spent several fortunes in seeking the honor of a derby winner.

Lord Woolavington is one of the most popular men on the British turf.

The only American-owned horse in the race was A. K. Macomber's War Mist.

His foot came into contact with a high voltage wire and he was knocked forty feet off the pole by 33,000 volts. His body was badly burned and his legs broken by the force of the fall. Broken bones in his legs pierced the flesh and entered the ground when he fell.

He was rushed to the Home hospital where physicians are in constant attendance. The other two boys were not hurt.

The bandits summoned Werst from his cottage according to the story told here and Mrs. Werst, becoming alarmed communicated with the Wihl boys who attacked the robbers.

CONSTABLE GIVEN LIFE TERM IN PRISON AFTER CONFESSING TRIPLE MURDER BY BOMB IN MAIL

Central Press Photos

Asa K. Bartlett, constable at Three Lakes, Mich., was sentenced to life imprisonment after he confessed sending the bomb that killed August Krubaech, left, his prospective son-in-law, William Franke, center, and his daughter, Janet Krubaech. The lower picture shows the bar room in the Three Lakes Inn where the bomb was received and opened as a wedding gift. On the left lower is Bartlett, who has already been serving sentence. He said he wanted to kill Krubaech because of political enmity.

MUSKEGON, Mich., June 2.—Circuit Judge John Vanderwerp yesterday sentenced Asa K. Bartlett, Blue Lake Township constable, to life imprisonment for the murder of August Krubaech, his daughter, Janet, and her fiancé, William Franke, killed by a bomb Thursday.

Judge Vanderwerp expressed regret that the state law does not provide for capital punishment. "You should be sentenced to death," Judge Vanderwerp said, "but it is useless for me to talk to you. Maybe in later years you will realize something of the dastardly crime you have committed. The sentence is that you be confined to the State House of Correction at Marquette for the rest of your life."

Bartlett was arraigned secretly shortly after 8 o'clock and then was taken into Circuit Court. The prisoner wore his old army uniform before a World War veteran. Judge Vanderwerp talked with him in private for a few minutes and then imposed sentence.

The early arraignment was ordered because of the strong feeling against Bartlett. Crowds scarcely had begun to form when Bartlett was started on his trip to Marquette.

Bartlett, who admitted having mailed the bomb because of political enmity toward Krubaech, showed no emotion and bowed politely to the Judge as the sentence was pronounced.

TO LET CONTRACTS
FRIDAY AFTERNOON

NASHVILLE, Tenn., June 2.—The question of whether or not Tennessee's famous law against teaching the theory of evolution in state-supported schools is constitutional was placed before the Tennessee Supreme Court yesterday for decision. An opinion is not expected before the fall term.

The case, brought to the state's highest court on appeal after the conviction last year of John Thomas Scopes, Dayton (Tenn.) schoolteacher, who was prosecuted by William Jennings Bryan as one of the Commoner's last acts, was argued before five Justices.

Clarence Darrow, Chicago, who opposed Bryan during the trial at Dayton last summer, continued the argument for Scopes with a plea for the "intellectual freedom of man." He was one of six attorneys who appeared for Scopes, against two for the state.

Women were much in evidence, and once they were admonished specifically to stop talking. It appeared to be the natural noise of a crowd rather than deliberate attempts to disturb the Court, for the spectators listened eagerly to the arguments.

The Court also admonished counsel to refrain from personalities and confine their remarks to the case itself, although Mr. Darrow, when the question of personal remarks came up, advised the Court and the attorneys that he would waive objections to any would said about him.

Mr. McConico's remark in the course of a vigorous attack on the American Civil Liberties Union, which had aided in Scopes' defense, that John T. Neal, senior counsel for Scopes, "knew how to get comfort," brought an admonishment against "personal attacks."

DEMOCRACY RALLIES AT PEACEFUL MEET HELD IN COLUMBUS

Consider Proposal To Back Pomerene For Senatorship

By United Press
COLUMBUS, O., June 2.—Ohio democracy rallied here today for what was expected to be one of the most harmonious but momentous sessions in the history of the party.

As the state central and executive committees convened behind closed doors for preliminary sessions, a score of important issues were known to be under discussion.

Outstanding among these were: 1—Proposed candidacy of former U. S. Senator Alton Pomerene for the senatorial nomination, opposing Judge Florence E. Allen, of the state supreme court.

2—Proposed abolition of the "two-thirds" rule under which national political conventions cannot nominate a presidential candidate unless a two thirds majority is obtained.

3—Plans for welding together struggling ends of the party and for launching the August primary campaign.

4—Endorsement of gubernatorial candidates and discussion of Gov. Vic. Donahue's candidacy for third term.

5—Drafting state and senatorial slates acceptable to incumbent party leaders.

Of considerable significance, in the opinion of party leaders, was the presence of former secretary of the navy, Josephus Daniels and U. S. Senator W. H. King, of Utah.

Daniels has fought the two-thirds rule tenaciously and was expected to propose its abandonment this afternoon.

Senator King was down for the keynote speech and according to well-informed sources will sound the 1928 battle cry of the party.

The future of political convention, so far as the Democratic party is concerned, was declared to hinge upon disposition of the two thirds rule issue.

Preliminary overtures, looking to abolition of the rule, have been launched in other states.

GOVERNOR SMITH IS GIVEN DEGREE

NEW YORK, June 2.—Governor Alfred E. Smith, of New York, received the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws tonight at Columbia University from President Nicholas Murray Butler, who has been mentioned frequently as a possible Republican candidate for governor in opposition to Governor Smith's expected candidacy.

Dr. Butler, in conferring the degree, paid tribute to the Governor as "alert, effective, public-spirited and courageous, constantly speaking the true voice of the people."

Governor Smith received the degree on the hundredth anniversary of the conferring of the doctor of laws degree upon DeWitt Clinton, then governor, by the university.

No intervening governor has received a similar degree from Columbia.

Former Congressman John J. Whitacre who is expected to become an independent candidate for the United States Senate.

Former Congressman Roscoe McCulloch, Republican, mentioned as a possible candidate for the governorship.

Supreme court justice George Clark whose name also is prominently linked with the Republican gubernatorial campaign.

Former Senator Alton Pomerene, Democrat whose home now is in Cleveland, but who maintains a law office in this city.

SELECT TWO JURORS
FOR DURKIN TRIAL

CHICAGO, June 2.—Two dozen veniremen passed through the jury box in rapid succession in the first day of trial of Martin J. Durkin, Chicago gunman, accused of having killed Edwin Shanahan, a Federal agent, who was attempted to arrest him for theft of an automobile.

At the end of the day only two had been accepted tentatively, and attorneys said it might take two weeks to select the jury. The state insisted upon a jury willing to inflict death upon a man guilty of murder, while the defense sought to obtain a jury of fathers, preferably those who had wayward sons.

Durkin appeared in Court dressed in the same shabby attire which he wore when he was arrested at St. Louis months ago, after a nationwide search for him following Shanahan's killing and the later slaying of a policeman and another man, when Durkin shot his way out of a police trap here.

SPRING HILL PUPIL CLAIMED BY LITTLE MIAMI ON TUESDAY

Donald Ennis Victim—
Played Hookey To Go Fishing

Donald Ennis, 11, son of William Ennis, Cincinnati Pike, was drowned in the Little Miami River, at Corwin, late Tuesday afternoon. The lad, with his brother, Ralph Ennis, 13 years, had played "hookey" from school Tuesday and with their fishing tackle had gone to the Corwin dam, where, while attempting to ford the river, the younger boy was drowned.

The dead boy was a pupil of the sixth grade, Spring Hill School. His brother attended Central Junior High School. Succumbing to attacks of "spring fever" and refusing to be kept indoors, the boys planned a secret fishing excursion Monday night. They hid their fishing tackle in a watchman's "shanty" at the Cincinnati Ave. crossing. They left the house Tuesday morning, ostensibly for school, according to their parents.

According to the story told by the older boy, he and his brother hiked the distance to the river and were given several "lifts." About a half-mile above the dam at Corwin, the boys attempted to ford the river by the aid of two logs. Several men were working nearby but the boys kept their efforts hidden from them for fear of detection, Ralph said. The boys obtained two logs and astride each, tried to cross the river. A short distance from shore, Ralph's log turned and threw him into the river.

After saving himself from the water by the aid of roots of a tree, he reached bank but discovered his brother was gone. After frantically trying to find the younger boy, Ralph called a nearby farmer named Graham who lived for the body. Workmen were unable to locate the body until 5:40 p. m. The body was found in two feet of sand and mud, near the river bank, in twelve feet of water.

Walter McClure, Waynesville undertaker, took charge of the body which was later brought to Xenia by R. M. Neeld, local undertaker.

The two boys were the only children in the family. Besides his brother Donald leaves his father and stepmother. The child's mother is living but is married again and living in another city.

Funeral services will be held at the Friends Church, Friday at 2:30 standard time with interment in Woodland Cemetery. The boy was a member of the Friends Sunday School.

POLITICAL LIGHT SHINES ON CANTON

CANTON, O., June 2.—The political spotlight which glowed here for a number of years during the life of William McKinley may again be directed upon Canton during the coming primary campaign and the fall election, it was declared today.

Four Canton men who have been prominent in state and national politics have been mentioned in connection with the gubernatorial and United States senatorial campaigns.

They are: Former Congressman John J. Whitacre who is expected to become an independent candidate for the United States Senate.

Former Congressman Roscoe McCulloch, Republican, mentioned as a possible candidate for the governorship.

Supreme court justice George Clark whose name also is prominently linked with the Republican gubernatorial campaign.

Former Senator Alton Pomerene, Democrat whose home now is in Cleveland, but who maintains a law office in this city.

Mack Sauer Looks Both Ways From Thirty And Finds Life Holds Promise

By MACK SAUER

Tomorrow I will be thirty. Please omit flowers. If you must send gifts, either of rock candy will be preferred.

Ten years ago I looked forward to the time when I would be thirty and out of debt. At thirty I look back to the time when I was twenty and think how fine it must have been to owe so little. Debts, however, have ceased to worry me. I have decided that, like the poor, debts I will have all ways with me. So I have settled down to a life of settling up and let come what may, including bill collectors.

I have reached a state of self-satisfaction where I refuse to let the ills of the day worry me. That popular song "Everything Will Be All Right" expresses my sentiments exactly. There are only three things I ever worry about. And I really don't worry about them—I merely wonder. I wonder how long my appendix, my wife and teeth will remain with me. There may be a separation between myself and either of them at any time. But I don't let that worry me. Doctors say the appendix has no use. Teeth can be replaced with false teeth. And I'm egotistic enough to think I can get another wife. So "What Do I Care?"

On leaving the glad, bad ten years of my twenties, I find my outlook on life is different than it was a few years ago. I have seen so much of the insincere and sham, heard so much of the blab and balogna, that at thirty I find myself sitting in the seat of the scornful looking for flaws in human conduct. I'm sorry. I am hoping that I will merge from this period of doubting ere long and will again believe and trust everyone. It's great if you can do it. But it's hard on your pocketbook. I have just learned that one of the men who was pointed out to me as an example of a real gentleman, when I was a boy, was all the time leading a secret life of shame. One of my best chums went to jail.

In my youth they told me Washington cut down the cherry tree and never told a lie. I have just learned they were spoofing me. They used to tell me my ancestors were worthless. Now I am told people pay real money to see them in the Cincinnati zoo. I'm getting so I won't believe anyone but myself, and when I read the things I write, I doubt part of them. I'm at the point where I'm about convinced there is no Santa Claus and I wouldn't be at all surprised to learn that the story of Jack and the Bean Stalk is a myth.

At twenty I held my head high and strutted by when those along the highway gave me applause. I was eager for the glad hand. I craved fame. At thirty I am different.

A slap on the back won't buy shoes for the baby. The applause of my fellowmen won't pay my telephone bill. (Thanks, Mr. Cleaver, for not taking my phone out. I'll pay you early next week). So now I go after the cold cash. And I find my stomach is better satisfied.

In my youth I thought only the Methodists amounted to anything. At thirty I know Catholics, Jews, Baptists and Presbyterians who are better than I am. I see some good in everyone. I enjoy poking fun at my competitors, but some of the best folks I know work on other papers. The finest real Christian gentleman I ever knew was a colored man.

I have much yet to learn. For instance, I have been studying why God created certain things. I've yet to find out why He made spinach and mosquitoes. By the time I am forty I hope to know I've seen much of the world, but have yet to see a girl taking a bath in a tub filled with champagne. I was a member of a literary society in high school, but have never made a luncheon club. Life at thirty is great. I enjoy every day of it, because I make it amusing. I don't take it seriously. I face each day with the wonderment and thrill of a gambler who turns up four aces. Mark Twain has been dead many years, but I visit him, listen to him, and feel that I know him. Longfellow is my friend. When I tire of the dull routine, I immediately seek suspense among my friends, whether dead or living, and my soul is lifted. But more of this anon.

Pump on, old heart, pump on, And red blood to me give; It's not because I fear to die— It's because it's great to live.

WHO'S WHO AND WHAT'S HAPPENED

NANCY LARRABEE is living with her mother.

VIRGINIA LELAND, in New York. Nancy's husband, an army officer, is stationed in the Philippines, and has left his wife behind. She believes that he came here for another woman than he does for her. While visiting in the Bahama Islands Nancy falls in love with

BILL EWING, and returns to New York, planning to get a divorce and marry him. Her mother is much interested in

FRANK HARRISON, an elderly bachelor.

Nancy received word that Jim has died at sea.

TODAY'S INSTALLMENT

XL—"LIFE MUST GO ON"

FOR a moment I stood staring at the cablegram, too completely stunned to realize fully what it meant.

Jim had died at sea. Had died on his way back to me, returning so that we could straighten out our affairs. I told myself that if I had not written him that I wished to be free so that I could marry Bill Ewing, he would not have asked to be transferred to another regiment, so that he could come back to the States and see me. It was my fault, then, that he was dead.

I would have given anything in the world not to have asked him to let me be free. Anything, if it would have meant that he would live again.

There was nothing that I could do, so way that I could find out just what had happened. My own helplessness maddened me. I walked the floor until I was worn out, and then sat down by the living-room window from which I could see the river and the bridges, and stared out into the misty night.

My own life seemed so useless, so artificial, that it disgusted me. I tried to remember Jim's devotion to Cecilia Eaton, to tell myself that he had been glad enough to go off to the Philippines without me. He hadn't wanted me along. Then why should I torture myself with thoughts of my negligence in not going with him?

That didn't make it any easier. When I thought of Jim big, good-looking, happy Jim, lying dead, I cried out in horror. I couldn't let that be true, I told myself. It just couldn't be!

I tried to think that what I had done really hadn't mattered. I told myself that if Jim had really cared for me, he wouldn't have let my mother come between us. But in such cases one can't reason.

Morning came at last, and I got up and dragged myself into the bedroom. My lovely evening gown was wrinkled and bedraggled looking; my hair was tumbling into my eyes. I looked gaunt and weary. But as I looked into the mirror I told myself that that didn't matter. I didn't think of how I looked. My thoughts were all on Jim, my Jim, whom I'd never see again.

I changed my frock, almost mechanically, more for something to do than for any other reason. I remembered breakfast, but the thought of trying to eat was repugnant. I began walking about the bare, deserted apartment again.

The man who acted as superintendent of the building came upstairs at about ten o'clock, to get the keys. I had quite forgotten that that was the day when I was supposed to leave and go to a hotel. I gave the keys to him, and put on my hat and coat.

"I beg your pardon—but if something is the matter—if there's anything I can do—" he said.

"Nothing's the matter," I answered. My voice sounded to me as if it belonged to someone else.

The telephone rang just then, and I answered it. Nathalie's voice answered me when I said "Hello."

"Oh Nancy, I'm glad to find you in," she exclaimed. "Do have luncheon with me, won't you? I have so much to tell you. Bill's coming to New York next week; he says that he can't go any longer without seeing you!"

"I never want to see Bill again!" I answered, and hung up the receiver.

I told myself that it was Bill who had indirectly been the cause of Jim's death. If I hadn't thought I cared for him—if I hadn't asked Jim to let me divorce him—a dozen "ifs" flashed through my mind.

Nathalie's voice answered me.

I went downstairs and hailed a taxi. I had made arrangements to go to one of the big hotels uptown, and the driver took me there so rapidly that when I arrived I was still in a daze.

As I registered a girl and a young man came up to the desk. A porter deposited some smart-looking bags, covered with foreign labels, beside them. The girl was laughing.

"Oh, I'm so excited over being home," I heard her say. "Think of seeing everyone again, and going to the apartment; when do you suppose we can move in? I'll feel like an old married woman. Instead of a bride, having my own home."

A bride and groom! Less than a year ago Jim and I had returned from our honeymoon, to settle down in he house on Governor's Island, and I was feeling like "an old married woman" then. Only it hadn't seemed like my own home because Virginia was there, to manage everything and make me feel that I was still just her daughter. Instead of Jim's wife.

If only I could begin over again!

Tomorrow—The Shadow of Sorrow.

FRANCHISE WILY BE CONSIDERED AGAIN WEDNESDAY NIGHT

Difficulties in reaching an agreement on the plans and specifications made a part of the ordinance granting the Dayton, Springfield and Xenia Southern Railway Co. a twenty-year renewal of its franchise into the city are expected to be ironed out at an adjourned meeting of City Commission Wednesday night.

Representatives of the company from Dayton have been invited by City Solicitor J. A. Finney to attend the recess meeting and present their objections to the specifications as drawn up by city engineers.

The specifications are made a part of the franchise ordinance and hold the traction people to an agreement to repair the street between the rails when the route formerly covered by the city street car on Detroit St. is torn up. They also protect the city in every conceivable way.

Protests of company officials held up passage of the ordinance on its second reading at the last commission meeting. This recess meeting has as its main object giving the company an opportunity to state its contentions in the matter.

CARL MAGEE WILL BE TRIED JUNE 14 ON MANSLAUGHTER CHARGE

LAS VEGAS, N. M., June 2.—When Carl C. Magee, editor of the State Tribune at Albuquerque, goes on trial here June 14, charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of John B. Lassiter, state highway employee, the dingy little court room will be the center of a drama that for three years has centered about the "stormy petrel" of New Mexican journalism.

When Judge Luis Armijo calls the court to order, many of the figures that have passed back and forth in the dramatic scenes of former trials will again be represented in the proceedings.

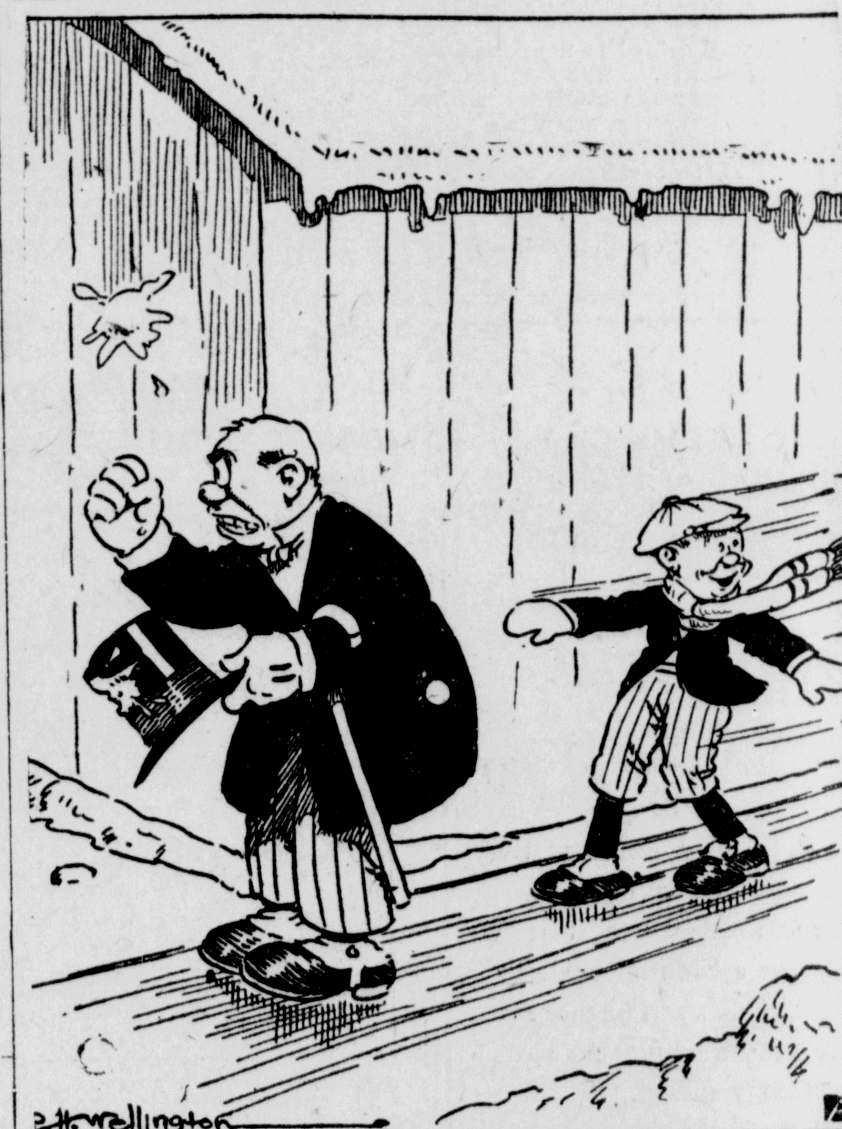

Judge Armijo, elected in 1924 over Judge Leahy, was district attorney at the time Judge Leahy sent Magee to jail on contempt of court charges, in July, 1924. He did not, however, appear in the cases against Magee, Judge Leahy having appointed C. J. Roberts and O. O. Askren special prosecutors.

Leahy, always presiding in past trials, will appear this time as a witness. It was Leahy's alleged surprise attack on the editor which resulted in the accidental killing of Lassiter, who attempted to intervene and entered the

THE WORST IS YET TO COME

TOO MANY BLONDES BUY BRUNETTE ROUGE

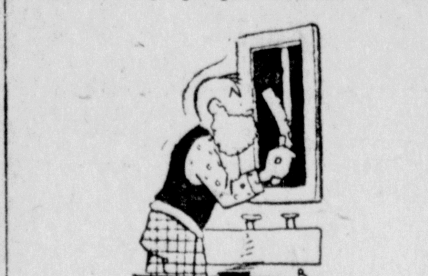

What common mistakes do you make? Some master mind has risen to remark that it is the little things in life that count but most people buy things, mistreat them and then raise a loud cry that the articles were no good. It's human nature. For instance:

Too many people eat bananas that are not completely ripened.

Too many people try to regulate their own watches with a penknife.

Too many blondes buy brunette rouge, and vice versa.
Too many men shave with dull razor blades.
Too many cooks burn fried eggs on the bottom.
Too many people don't follow the directions for washing fine silks.
Too many motorists forget to water their storage batteries.
Too many people can't open a new volume without breaking the binding.
Too many people think it nonsense to change steel phonograph records every time a record is played.

Too many people play approach shots with a spoon.

Too many smokers let fine cigars dry out.

Too many people use fountain pens with points unsuited to their handwriting.

Too many housekeepers use too much floor wax and try to polish before the wax is dry.

Too many people use a toothbrush horizontally instead of with a vertical or rotary motion.

These are some of the common mistakes made in using widely advertised and simple products. This also offers the manufacturer one of his biggest problems for he spends thousands of dollars annually in educational advertising to instruct people in the right way to use his product. Instead they persist in misusing it.

However, it seems with all the mistakes made daily in simple matters the acquiring of an education in common acts is terribly complicated.

Manufacturers say that if you start a thing in the right way every thing will be all right; you will acquire the habit of doing things the correct way and this habit will stick.

BRIDGE REPAIRED FOLLOWING CAVE IN

Workmen under Milton Ireland, highway superintendent, repaired the Little Miami River bridge, Dayton and Xenia Pike, at Trebeins last night after a heavy truck caused a cave-in of flooring Tuesday afternoon.

Wood blocks in a space three or four feet long and two feet wide, and cross beams underneath, broke under the truck. Neighbors guarded the damaged section and notified County Surveyor W. J. Day's and Sheriff Morris Sharp, who investigated.

The broken section was on the north end of the bridge and on the west side. Traffic was able to continue east of the broken section.

From School Teacher To Great Eminence

A young man who was brought up on a farm in Western Pennsylvania studied diligently and qualified for district school teacher. Further pursuing his studies and teaching, he managed to save up enough money to put him through medical college. He began the practice of medicine in the new oil section of Pennsylvania.

He was a student of nature, knew and could easily recognize most of the medicinal plants growing in the woods.

Later, he moved to Buffalo, N. Y., where he launched his favorite remedies, and in a short time, they were sold by every druggist in the land. Today, the name of this man, Dr. R. V. Pierce, is known throughout the world. His Golden Medical Discovery is the best known blood medicine and tonic. More than fifty million bottles have been sold in the U. S. If your druggist does not sell the Golden Medical Discovery, in liquid or tablets, you can obtain a trial package of the tablets by sending 10c to the Dr. Pierce Clinic in Buffalo, N. Y. adv

THE BOBBED HAIR STORY

NOT many days ago we wrote an editorial in which we had occasion to take to task a minister in Kentucky who preached a sermon against women with bobbed hair.

The thing that brought the matter to attention was the fact that a girl who slapped his face after he had delivered his sermon was ordered to spend thirty days in jail.

Since then however the governor of Kentucky has seen fit to intervene and the sentence has been quashed.

We are not vindictive and believe that the matter ought to be dropped now. However if the minister is a man he will make some public utterance in which he admits that there may be good bobbed haired women, despite what he said a little while ago.

ONCE MORE IT'S MR. KOHLER

SO MR. KOHLER is going to use the law to fight the law.

The sheriff at Cleveland is not going to give prisoners the food ordered by the judges. Not at all. He has been making profit for himself by portioning out what have called 'starvation rations,' and as already pointed out by this newspaper has the law on his side.

Mr. Kohler is allowed so much per day for feeding prisoners. If he can feed them for less he is entitled to pocket the profit.

He has been doing this at the cost of prisoners' appetites.

Then some judges told him he had to stop profiteering and give better food. But Mr. Kohler now obtains an injunction which will for the time being enable him to disregard the order.

Why shouldn't Mr. Kohler keep on making profit if he can do so legally? Why should he consider the welfare of 'criminals'? From the humanitarian standpoint? Perhaps so.

But if he has to spend money electioneering in order to secure his office, it seems only logical to expect that he will reimburse himself for the sums he has expended in a public office, before he considers the appetites of offenders.

Perhaps Mr. Kohler has not yet been in office long enough to enable him to fully compensate for his election and political expenditures.

We hope that some method will be devised before long by which certain sheriffs are returned their campaign expenses upon election.

The Theatre

Governor Smith, of New York, has been suggested as "Czar" of the theater, as Judge Landis is of baseball and Will Hays of the screen. "Nothing quite so absurd has been proposed for some time," says Arthur Hornblow, editor in chief, Theatre Magazine. "Why pick on Governor Smith? Why not the Pope? Or Lloyd George?"

There is no need of a "Czar" in the theater, declares Mr. Hornblow, who goes on to point out that it was to get rid of the czar type of manager that the actors fought their splendid fight and won their independence. Only a few years ago certain arrogant managers used breathing methods in their relations with artists. They foolishly imagined their exalted position as Broadway producers, their privilege as employers, gave them the right to tyrannize over their actors. They were taught their lesson and it was a bitter awakening for many.

I haven't much money, but plenty of gold,
The sunrise and sunset are mine to behold,
And that has a lustre which never grows cold.

I haven't much currency, but I possess,
The silver maple tree has in her dress,
And the weight and the worth of it no man could guess.

I haven't much money, but out on my lawn
Are millions and millions of diamonds at dawn,
Better jewels than those which thieves pilfer to pawn.

I don't like to boast, but I own every tree,
Every rose bush in blossom I happen to see,
Once I gaze on their charms none can take them from me.

The sun and the moon and the stars are all mine,
I own oceans and rivers and forests of pine;
In fact I'm a partner in all that's divine.

A Reader Friend, Mrs. L. has written: "What foods are served in timbale cases?"

To make Swedish Timbales: Beat two unseparated eggs, stir into them one cup of white flour mixed with a pinch of salt and one teaspoon of granulated sugar; add one-half cup of cold, sweet milk and one tablespoon of olive oil. Do not beat more than is necessary to mix these ingredients. The timbale iron must be heated in the ket of deep fat then drained, wiped off clean paper and dipped into the batter (which should be in a pitcher). Hold the iron in the batter till a coating of batter clings to it, then put it back into the hot fat and cook till crisp and light brown. Drain on crumpled paper and cool before filling.

These little crisp cases may be filled with Creamed Oysters, Creamed Chicken, Creamed Lobster, Creamed Sweetbreads, a combination of Chicken and Sweetbreads with Mushrooms, or simply the Creamed Chicken with the Mushrooms. Or the cases may be filled with ripe strawberries, sprinkled with powdered sugar and topped with a tiny dab of whipped cream, as a dessert. At a formal dinner Swedish timbales.

SIDELIGHTS ON Greene County History

OATS, RYE, BARLEY, BUCKWHEAT.

Oats has been raised practically from the beginning of the county's history.

As early as 1840 the county produced 157,668 bushels, which, according to census figures for that year, had a gross value of $23,864, or about fifteen cents per bushel. In 1850 the government census returned the oat and rye crop together, giving the county credit for 128,772 bushels.

Oats has been a staple crop from the earliest days, and is still grown by practically every farmer in the county. It is a grain which responds readily to commercial fertilizer and for this reason has enjoyed a good yield with little increase in the acreage sown. In 1916 the county reported 275,574 bushels, Ross Twp., with a yield of 53,914 bushels, leading in the amount raised.

Rye has never been extensively grown in the county for its grain, although many farmers have raised it as a forage crop. The first definite report on rye was in 1840 when 12,006 bushels with a value of $5,000 was produced.

Barley has been grown even less than rye. The census report of 1840 makes no return of barley, while in 1850 there were only 1,373 bushels reported. For several years the farmers of the county have been growing both winter and spring barley, with the former having the largest acreage.

Buckwheat was formerly grown by most of the farmers of the county, although most of them had only a small patch of it. In the early days of the county, it was grown for the pancake value of the grain, but in these days home-grown pancake flour is practically a thing of the past. In 1850 there were 2,735 bushels of buckwheat reported for the county, but this evidently did not include the small yield of hundreds of the small patches of the county which the farmers did not think it necessary to return to the assessor.

MODISH MITZI—Maybe Mitzi Inherited Her Extravagance BY J. V. JAY

Dad is giving Mitzi one of his famous economy lectures. No matter how many he gives her he will always have one left. Mitzi is out to convince him that the coat with the fitted yoke is not expensive considering the workmanship and Dad must see for himself how smart it is.

It was really very inconvenient for this package to arrive, not to say embarrassing. Dad has lost his voice and his words. He only has looks left—some very mean ones. They do not seem to be softened by the attractive black crepe gown with the jabot and sleeve effect so finely pleated.

"But I must show you, Dad," says Mitzi, taking the bull by the horns as it were. "I must show you how really practical I am. This coat was so reasonable." Dad doesn't look as if he could be reasoned with. The coat is taffeta, straight in line and with a stand-up collar. It's becoming to Mitzi, of course.

"Not only was it reasonable," continues Mitzi, "but it is reversible," demonstrates the scolded child. It is lined with Scotch plaid woolen lining, and can be worn taffeta or plaid side out. Well, of course, Mitzi is extravagant but she's clever, too. And after all, well, thinks Dad, she does take after him, so it ended amicably.

Today's Talk

IF YOU KNOW

The trouble with a large part of this world is that it doesn't know. When you know, you are able to appreciate, you see all sides, you measure accurately, you sense values quickly, you appraise as you go along.

People who know are slow to anger, patient, tolerant, and magnanimous when to be so means greatness.

If you know, you will not say the word that might sink deep into someone else's heart and make that heart bleed with hurt.

If you know, you will walk through crowds and still be above that crowd in poise, pride and power. You will be at home with those who are both below and above you.

If you know, you will cover up your bitterness and take your wounds into a silent place and there dress them so that healing may set in quickly.

If you know, you will not mind the rough words and the selfish sneers of the ignorant.

He who thinks, who learns from everything and everybody, who finds nothing mean or base in the elemental heart of the world, and who serves whenever and wherever he can, regardless of favor or reward—he alone is intelligent.

He impresses upon each juror that he must know and be sure that he knows and that what he knows must be facts that are indisputable.

If you know yourself, never mind what other people may say or think. For by knowing yourself thoroughly you learn to know all men.

Two Women Find Health Essential to Happiness

"My mother-in-law," says Mrs. Belle Thompson, Route 2, Rossville, Ga., "told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash. I took six bottles of the Vegetable Compound. I could sleep and would get up in the morning singing and feeling fine. I am the mother of three children, and always after the babies came I had to take treatments, but I can truly say that this last time I have only used the Sanative Wash. It does more good than the treatments. It keeps me on my feet to care for my children and I do most of my work. I feel it my duty to let you know how both of the medicines have helped me."

By GEORGE M'MANUS

No I have never been to college. Neither has Jiggs although he speaks Spanish, Italian, Portuguese, Danish, Norwegian, Japanese and Polish—with the aid of a translator. I started drawing when a boy and was in New York doing comics for the New York World at twenty-one. Jiggs, according to the biography some ambitious press agent created for him a year or two ago, married young and spent so much money replacing fractured rolling pins, splintered bits of ocarina and pulverized crockery and glassware that he could never afford an education. I heartily approve of a university education and have done my bit by putting Jiggs' daughter, Nora, through college. As a result she is the fearless young intellectual of the family and an ambidextrous as it has never brought her any harm but I cannot recommend that, thing but an outworn shoe—and that cost Jiggs broken window, through which it passed in transit.

If I had been to college doubtless I could have invested "Bringing Up Father" with a psychological setting from Freud or Jung—thus insuring myself an intermittent mention in the suppressed magazines. Jiggs might be given a complex of some sort (in addition, of course, to the inferiority complex which he now maintains—the fracture strength of his skull being inferior to the pounding strength of the ordinary household rolling pin). Certain critics have actually detected a trace of philosophy in my work—something which I assuredly never put in myself. One, a certain Patrick Kearney writing for Vanity Fair, has dubbed me a pessimist. His article was entitled "The Pessimism of the Comic Strip" with the sub title "The Funny Papers Considered as National, Social and Psychological Documents." Since the article leads off with a picture of mine and later alludes to me as one of the cartoonists whose work deals with married life "in its lowest level of painfulness." I have read it a half dozen times.

I have been so long in the laugh-making business myself that a writer has to step some to blast an honest-to-goodness belt-snapping roof-lifting laugh out of me. But my hat is off to Patrick Kearney, psychologist and enthusiastic young intellectual. May his writing arm retain to the end its fresh young vigor and flexibility.

Patrick takes his comics with ponderous and mastodontic seriousness, not to say with profound and melancholy misgivings. He says: "There is no such thing as a happy ending in the comics. If happiness appears in them at all, it is always immediately afterward shown to be based on misconception, and served only the dramatic purpose of heightening the miserable and unhappy culmination."

"In all of these comics the things which are represented as funny are the things which in life are considered heart breaking. We can scarcely parallel it in all literature save in the terrible plays of Strindberg and in the writings of the more sombre of the Russians. (It is good to know that you profess having read Strindberg and the more sombre Russian, Patrick.)

"We are neither amused nor repelled," continues this authority on the more sombre Russians, "by a misrepresentation unless we find in it some truth about ourselves or about our life, and we cannot avoid the conclusion that the life depicted in the comic papers is a mirror of the life actually led by those who read and enjoy them. The mirror may distort and disguise and exaggerate but it is a mirror and a fundamentally truthful one. It is a curious but familiar trick of human psychology that we can enjoy seeing a mirrored representation of the things we flee from in life."

These are his exact words. At this point by the fourth or fifth time I read the article, I was able to make out that Mr. Kearney was not picking on us comic artists but on Life. Kearney goes on to support with evidence from the comics the general proposition that: "The conclusions concerning the failure of our civilization to give happiness and peace to the majority are unavoidable. The comics, flooding the homes of the land every Sunday morning, give mocking testimony of the falsity of the platitudes preached that very morning from the pulpits."

I suppose my sympathy will be no great consolation to Kearney, but he has it, I am deeply moved to sympathy every time I find a man named Kearney, or O'Reilly or McManus worrying about our civilization or our pulpits, or about the attraction of gravitation, or about our Niagara Falls, or our differential calculus, or our anything. All he has to do is change them—he can. Kearney doesn't present any plan. But none of them do.

I discover that he crawls through the trench dug out by several thousand previous critics of everything from mathematics to comics—he means to criticize life, which is mirrored in the comic strip, but is unable to find the foundation of his subject.

It has always been my contention that a comic strip should primarily be funny. The average reader finds enough in our newspapers to be sad about. There are new wars; gangster perils; attempts to tie the international knot, invariably ending in a granny; reports of an alarming increase in the number of college graduates and so on. Consequently the average man is in need of some sort of humorous food to brighten him up into feeling equal to the daily wrestle with his work. I like to feel that "Bringing Up Father" is a high-candle power contribution to that brightening of it fits the comic into a certain niche and makes the drawing of it take on the characteristics of service.

Consequently I try first of all to always keep the comic funny. I usually don't feel that, as a moment's consideration will prove, is essential to my remaining outside of the boundaries of an insane asylum. Drawing comics takes up about 85 per cent of my time and it is obviously impossible for anyone outside of an asylum to feel and act funny such a proportion of his living time with the possible exception of the comedian of a fraternity group. He is the boy I envy.

JOSEPH HUTCHISON SEEKS NOMINATION

Joseph T. Hutchison, Beaver Creek Twp. farmer, has filed his declaration of candidacy for the Republican nomination for county treasurer subject to the primary August 10, with the board of elections.

Mr. Hutchison was a candidate for treasurer several years ago, but was defeated for the nomination.

His declaration for this office is the second to be filed with the election board. Sheriff Morris Sharp officially announced last week.

According to rumor's five other prospective candidates are preparing to announce for the office of county treasurer before the time limit for filing expires, June 11.

PREVAILING PRICES ALLOW XENIA WOMEN TO KEEP PRETTY CHEAPLY IS LEARNED

While figures show that each woman in the nation spends an average of nearly a dollar a day to make herself attractive, Xenia women are holding their beauty at a much cheaper price. Seven dollars a week for purposes of beauty is a fair figure in Chicago and other

American cities, according to Paul Rillings, former president of the Chicago and Illinois Hairdressers Association.

He figures a shampoo at $1.00, tonic rub at fifty cents, marcel wave at $1.50, facial massage at $2.00, manicure at $1.00 and eyebrow arch at $1.00.

Xenia women can get a shampoo and tonic together for $1.00, marcel at $1.00, "facial" at $1.00, manicure at seventy-five cents and eyebrow arch at fifty cents. And who will dare to say Xenia women are not as beautiful as Chicago or those of other cities?

What price beauty? Government statistics show that American women spent $30,000,000 a day for beautification. This enormous sum does not include clothes or high priced silk hose, but merely cosmetics and the hundred and one things that a woman can have done to her in a beauty parlor.

The operations mentioned do not include all a beauty shop will perform in the interests of loveliness. Creams of all kinds may be applied, hair may be cut and dressed, permanent waves at $15 each may be given and various electric treatments are offered. If a woman's face does not suit her taste, she may even go to a plastic surgeon and have it remodeled. But she can't enjoy Xenia prices in this operation.

There are, however, many women who seldom enter a beauty parlor except for some special occasion, but who spend large sums of money on home treatments.

When a woman arises in the morning she puts a cream on her face as a powder base. Then comes powder, then rouge, and more powder to "tone down" the rouge. Lipstick is then applied and a little eyebrow pencil may be added. A few whiffs of perfume, a bit of some oil on the permanent wave and midday is "fixed."—for a short time at least. Other creams may be added through out the day, to prevent chafing, sunburn, etc.

All these preparations cost money. The shelves of the ordinary drug store are loaded with all sorts of beauty helps and whole pages of advertising are written about various preparations, from soap to electric vibrators.

The Xenia woman prizes her beauty and with good reason, for it costs her much in time and money to maintain it!

TREASURER VISITS TOWNS NEXT WEEK

County Treasurer Frank A. Jackson announces that collection of the June half of 1925 taxes for accommodation of taxpayers outside the city will begin at certain banks in the various villages Monday.

Another announcement was made by Treasurer Jackson Wednesday in the nature of a warning to cigarette dealers. A few merchants have failed to pay their cigarette tax and the treasurer, warns the last day to do so is June 20, after which all delinquents are subject to a penalty of $100.

This is a state law and no extension of time will be given, he declared.

ANTIOCH DEFEATS SPRINGFIELD NINE

Maclean hurried brilliantly and Antioch College batted out a 20 to 1 victory over the Springfield Pirates Tuesday afternoon at Yellow Springs.

For four innings the game was closely fought but Craig, Pirate hurler, weakened in the fifth and Antioch scored eighteen runs in the last four innings.

Maclean limited the Pirates to six scattered safeties and was accorded good support in the field. Coach Earl E. Prugh's boys enjoyed a batting spree hammering out fifteen hits and scored at least once in every inning but the first and second.

Clifton lost to Antioch last Saturday 16 to 2.

The college nine will meet the Springfield Dairy Products team on the Yellow Springs diamond next Saturday.

They say
I'm
"fussy"

WELL, let that go. I'm ready to admit that so far as pipe tobacco is concerned, I've got ideas. And if insisting on a tobacco that won't bite the tongue or parch the throat is "being fussy," you can write "guilty" alongside my name, and I won't even appeal the charge.

I can't speak for anybody else, but personally I smoke for pleasure! So I smoke Prince Albert. I'll say I do. Right after breakfast, on up until I switch off the light for the night. Pipe-load after pipe-load. Day after day. Prince Albert treats my tongue as gently as a mother handles a brand-new baby.

They tell me it's the Prince Albert process that cuts out bite and parch. Fair enough. I'll testify before the well-known world that P. A. is the coolest, sweetest, most genuinely friendly smoke a fellow can get on this planet. You suspect that the minute you throw back the hinged lid on the tidy red tin and get a whiff of real tobacco.

Now, I'm telling you to be fussy about your smoking. Many a pipe-smoker has fooled himself when he should have been soothing himself with P. A. I say it pays to be fussy about anything that means so much to a man. What do you think?

—no other tobacco is like it!

P. A. is sold everywhere in tidy red tins, pound and half-pound tin humidors, and pound crystal-glass humidors with sponge-moistener top. And always with every bit of bite and parch removed by the Prince Albert process.

STATE ENGINEER TO VISIT BRYAN FARM SPORTSMEN LEARN

Assurance was given in two letters read from State Agricultural Director Charles V. Truax at the monthly meeting of the Greene County Fish and Game Protective Association Tuesday night that a state engineer and a representative of the state forestry department would inspect the John Bryan farm near Yellow Springs within fifteen days.

The survey will be made to determine what advantages it presents as the probable site for the next fish hatchery and game preserve to be established in Ohio.

The two state officials are now engaged in launching a hatchery at Piqua and their services will not be available for about two weeks. They have received instructions, however, to proceed immediately to Greene County once their work at Piqua is finished, according to the letters.

A delegation of Greene County sportsmen intend to accompany the state men on the inspection trip. Members also appointed a committee at the Tuesday meeting to decide upon a site for the annual all-day picnic and frolic in August. No date was definitely set but it is tentatively planned to hold the picnic at the Bryan farm if this can be arranged.

ARREST OFFICIALS AFTER UNION BANK FAILURE

PROMINENT PEOPLE INVOLVED IN CRASH INVESTIGATORS SAY

Further Arrests Are Expected—Two Are Now In Custody

STEUBENVILLE, O., June 2.—A number of prominent persons may be involved in the failure of the Union Savings Bank of Yorkville in connection with which, Thomas S. Jones, vice president and his brother, W. E. Jones, cashier, have been arrested, officials of the state banking department declared today.

Further arrests are imminent according to County Prosecutor Roy N. Merryman, who ordered the Jones brothers taken into custody. Thomas Jones, who resides here has been liberated under $30,000 bond and his brother, living in Martin Perry has been released under $40,000 bond.

Thomas Jones faces three charges, according to Merryman. First, that on January 4, 1925, he forged a promissory note for $5,500; second, that he misapplied the money secured through the alleged false note; third, that he unlawfully abstracted from the bank, a $50,000 certificate of deposit in favor of Thomas W. Jones, and John G. Belknap, upon which he secured $50,000 from the Guardian Trust Co., of Cleveland and deposited the account to the credit of Thomas E. Jones. W. E. Jones also faces this charge.

Belknap is a former probate judge and Francis an ex-congressman. W. E. Jones, also faces charges of making false entries, misapplying funds and publishing a false financial statement.

When the bank was taken over by the state banking department a $305,000 loan to West Virginia Coal interests was said to have caused the crash.

LONG SHOT WINNER OF ENGLISH DERBY; FAVORITE IS THIRD

Coronach Takes Classic From Colorado and Lance Gaye

EPSOM DOWNS, Eng., June 2.—Lord Woolavington's Coronach today won the derby.

William Singer, Lance Gaye, was second and Colorado, owned by the Earl of Derby, the favorite with about $10,000,000 of the public's money, on him was third.

Nineteen horses ran.

The betting was eleven to two on Coronach, forty to one on Lance Gaye, 2 to 1 on Colorado.

Just before the race, betting was 7 to 4 against Colorado and 100 to 14 against Coronach.

Lord Woolavington saw his second derby winner come down the stretch today. In 1922 his Lordship achieved his first derby victory with Captain Cuttle, Steve Donoghue up. But this famous distiller who is chairman of Messrs. John Buchanan and Company, makers of the famous whiskey, had spent several fortunes in seeking the honor of a derby winner.

Lord Woolavington is one of the most popular men on the British turf.

The only American-owned horse in the race was A. K. Macomber's War Mist.

HOME PUPIL CRITICALLY HURT IN FALL FROM POLE

Ellsworth Elliott Comes In Contact With High Tension Wire—Taken To Hospital With Serious Injuries

With both legs broken above the knee and with severe burns over his body, Ellsworth Elliott, 13, pupil of Cottage 13, O. S. and S. O. Home, is in a critical condition at the Home Hospital, after he fell from a telegraph pole, near the grounds Tuesday evening at 5:50 o'clock.

The lad, with two other boys, left the grounds against the rules of the institution, during the matron's supper hour. The Elliott boy climbed to the top of a telegraph pole near the railroad tracks that enter the Home grounds.

His foot came into contact with a high voltage wire and he was knocked forty feet off the pole by 23,000 volts. His body was badly burned and his legs broken by the force of the fall. Broken bones in his legs pierced the flesh and entered the ground when he fell.

He was rushed to the Home hospital where physicians are in constant attendance. The other two boys were not hurt.

BANDITS ARRESTED AFTER FRUSTRATED ATTEMPT AT HOLD UP

Jack Werst, Dayton Diamond Salesman, Picked as Victim

BELLEFONTAINE, O., June 2.—Frustrated in an attempt to rob Jack M. Werst, Dayton diamond salesman, three alleged bandits were held here today, their arrest brought about by three brothers, Louis, Frank and Herman Wihl, of Columbus.

The attempted robbery occurred at Russell Point Indian Lake, where Werst and his wife had gone for an outing. The Wihl boys with three Springfield youths, were camping nearby.

The bandits summoned Werst from his cottage according to the story told here and Mrs. Werst coming alarmed communicated with the Wihl boys who attacked the robbers.

Louis Wihl was wounded during the ensuing fight and the bandits fled. Later they were captured near a Russell Point restaurant and were identified.

The diamonds sought by the men were in a safe in a cottage near the Werst house.

The men captured were Richard Hanan, Frank Moulton and Harry Robinson, all of Springfield.

CONSTABLE GIVEN LIFE TERM IN PRISON AFTER CONFESSING TRIPLE MURDER BY BOMB IN MAIL

Asa K. Bartlett, constable at Three Lakes, Mich., was sentenced to life imprisonment after he confessed sending the bomb that killed August Krubaek, left, his prospective son-in-law, William Franke, center, and his daughter, Janet Krubaek. The lower picture shows the bar room in the Three Lakes Inn where the bomb was received and opened as a wedding gift. On the left lower is Bartlett, who has already begun serving sentence. He said he wanted to kill Krubaek because of political enmity.

MUSKEGON, Mich., June 2.—Circuit Judge John Vanderwerp yesterday sentenced Asa K. Bartlett, Blue Lake Township constable, to life imprisonment for the murder of August Krubaek, his daughter, Janet, and her fiancé, William Franke, killed by a bomb Thursday. Judge Vanderwerp expressed regret that the state law does not provide for capital punishment.

"You should be sentenced to death," Judge Vanderwerp said, "but it is useless for me to talk to you. Maybe in later years you will realize something of the dastardly crime you have committed. The sentence is that you be confined to the State House of Correction at Marquette for the rest of your life."

Bartlett was arraigned secretly shortly after 8 o'clock and then was taken into Circuit Court. The prisoner wore his old army uniform because he was a World War veteran. Judge Vanderwerp talked with him in private for a few minutes and then imposed sentence.

The early arraignment was ordered because of the strong feeling against Bartlett. Crowds scarcely had begun to form when Bartlett was started on his trip to Marquette.

Bartlett, who admitted having mailed the bomb because of political enmity toward Krubaek, who was Township Supervisor, showed no emotion and bowed politely to the Judge as the sentence was pronounced.

DARROW URGES INTELLECTUAL FREEDOM IN PLEA AT FINAL HEARING ON SCOPES EVOLUTION CASE

NASHVILLE, Tenn., June 2.—The question of whether or not Tennessee's famous law against teaching the theory of evolution in state-supported schools is constitutional was placed before the Tennessee Supreme Court yesterday for decision. An opinion is not expected before the fall term.

The case, brought to the state's highest Court on appeal after the conviction last year of John Thomas Scopes, Dayton (Tenn.) schoolteacher, who was prosecuted by William Jennings Bryan as one of the Commoner's last acts, was argued before five Justices.

Clarence Darrow, Chicago, who opposed Bryan during the trial at Dayton last summer, concluded the argument for Scopes with a plea for the "intellectual freedom of man." He was one of six attorneys who appeared for Scopes, against two for the state.

DEMOCRACY RALLIES AT PEACEFUL MEET HELD IN COLUMBUS

Consider Proposal To Back Pomerene For Senatorship

By United Press
COLUMBUS, O., June 2.—Ohio democracy rallied here today for what was expected to be one of the most harmonious but momentous sessions in the history of the party.

As the state central and executive committees convened behind closed doors for preliminary sessions, a score of important issues were known to be under discussion.

Outstanding among these were: 1—Proposed candidacy of former U. S. Senator Alton Pomerene for the senatorial nomination, opposing Judge Florence E. Allen, of the state supreme court.

2—Proposed abolition of the "two-thirds" rule under which national political conventions cannot nominate a presidential candidate unless a two thirds majority is obtained.

3—Plans for welding together struggling ends of the party and for launching the August primary campaign.

4—Endorsement of gubernatorial candidates and discussion of Gov. Vic. Donahey's candidacy for third term.

5—Drafting state and senatorial slates acceptable to incumbent party leaders.

Of considerable significance, in the opinion of party leaders, was the presence of former secretary of the navy, Josephus Daniels and U. S. Senator W. H. King, of Utah.

Daniels has fought the two-thirds rule tenaciously and was expected to propose its abandonment this afternoon.

Senator King was down for the keynote speech and according to well-informed sources will sound the 1926 battle cry of the party.

The future of political ascendance, so far as the Democratic party is concerned, was declared to hinge upon disposition of the two thirds rule issue.

Preliminary overtures, looking to abolition of the rule, have been launched in other states.

GOVERNOR SMITH IS GIVEN DEGREE

NEW YORK, June 2.—Governor Alfred E. Smith, of New York, received the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws tonight at Columbia University from President Nicholas Murray Butler, who has been mentioned frequently as a possible Republican candidate for governor in opposition to Governor Smith's expected candidacy.

Dr. Butler, in conferring the degree, paid tribute to the Governor as "alert, effective, public-spirited and courageous, constantly speaking the true voice of the people."

Governor Smith received the degree on the hundredth anniversary of the conferring of the doctor of laws degree upon DeWitt Clinton, then governor, by the university.

No intervening governor has received a similar degree from Columbia.

Specifically to stop talking. It appeared to be the natural noise of a crowd rather than deliberate attempts to disturb the Court, for the spectators listened eagerly to the arguments.

The Court also admonished counsel to refrain from personalities and confine their remarks to the case itself, although Mr. Darrow, when the question of personal remarks came up, advised the Court and the attorneys that he would waive objections to anything said about him, his remarks, or books he has written.

Mr. McConico's remark in the course of a vigorous attack on the American Civil Liberties Union, which had aided in Scopes defense, that John T. Neal, senior counsel for Scopes, "knew where to get comfort," was one of the remarks that brought an admonishment against "personal attacks."

Durkin appeared in Court dressed in the same shabby attire which he wore when he was arrested at St. Louis months ago, after a nationwide search for him following Shanahan's killing and the later slaying of a policeman and another man when Durkin shot his way out of a police trap here.

SPRING HILL PUPIL CLAIMED BY LITTLE MIAMI ON TUESDAY

Donald Ennis Victim—Played Hookey To Go Fishing

Donald Ennis, 11, son of William Ennis, Cincinnati Pike, was drowned in the Little Miami River, at Corwin, late Tuesday afternoon.

The lad, with his brother, Ralph Ennis, 13 years, had played "hookey" from school Tuesday and with their fishing tackle had gone to the Corwin dam, where, while attempting to ford the river, the younger boy was drowned.

The dead boy was a pupil of the sixth grade, Spring Hill School. His brother attended Central Junior High School. Suspecting to attacks of "spring fever" and refusing to be kept indoors, the boys planned a secret fishing excursion Monday night. They hid their fishing tackle in a watchman's "shanty" at the Cincinnati Ave. crossing. They left the house Tuesday morning, ostensibly for school, according to their parents.

According to the story told by the older boy, he and his brother hiked the distance to the river and were given several "lifts." About a half-mile above the dam at Corwin, the boys attempted to ford the river by the aid of two logs. Several men were working nearby but the boys kept their efforts hidden from them for fear of detection, Ralph said. The boys obtained two logs and astride each, tried to cross the river. A short distance from shore, Ralph's log turned and threw him into the river.

After saving himself from the water by the aid of roots of a tree, he reached bank but discovered his brother was gone. After frantically trying to find the younger boy, Ralph called a nearby farmer named Graham who dived for the body. Workmen were unable to locate the body until 5:40 p. m. The body was found in two feet of sand and mud, near the river bank, in twelve feet of water.

Walter McCure, Waynesville undertaker, took charge of the body which was later brought to Xenia by R. M. Neeld, local undertaker.

The two boys were the only children in the family. Besides his brother Donald leaves his father and stepmother. The child's mother is living but is married again and living in another city.

Funeral services will be held at the Friends Church, Friday at 2:30 p. m. with interment in Woodland Cemetery. The boy was a member of the Friends Sunday School.

POLITICAL LIGHT SHINES ON CANTON

CANTON, O., June 2.—The political spotlight which glowed here for a number of years during the life of William McKelvey may again be directed upon Canton during the coming primary campaign and the fall election, it was declared today.

Four Canton men who have been prominent in state and national politics have been mentioned in connection with the gubernatorial and United States senatorial campaigns. They are:

Former Congressman John J. Whitacre who is expected to become an independent candidate for the United States Senate.

Former Congressman Roscoe McCulloch, Republican, mentioned as a possible candidate for the governorship.

Supreme court justice George Clark whose name also is prominently linked with the Republican gubernatorial campaign.

Former Senator Alton Pomerene, Democrat whose home now is in Cleveland, but who maintains a law office in this city.

SELECT TWO JURORS FOR DURKIN TRIAL

CHICAGO, June 2.—Two dozen veniremen passed through the jury box in rapid succession in the first day of trial of Martin J. Durkin, Chicago gunman, accused of having killed Edwin Shanahan, a Federal agent, who attempted to arrest him for theft of an automobile.

At the end of the day only two had been accepted tentatively, and attorneys said it might take two weeks to select the jury. The state insisted upon a jury willing to inflict death upon a man guilty of murder, while the defense sought to obtain a jury of fathers, preferably those who had wayward sons.

Durkin appeared in Court dressed in the same shabby attire which he wore when he was arrested at St. Louis months ago, after a nationwide search for him following Shanahan's killing and the later slaying of a policeman and another man when Durkin shot his way out of a police trap here.

Mack Sauer Looks Both Ways From Thirty And Finds Life Holds Promise

By MACK SAUER

Tomorrow I will be thirty. Please omit flowers. If you must send gifts, either a rock candy will be preferred.

Ten years ago I looked forward to the time when I would be thirty and out of debt. At thirty I look back to the time when I was twenty and think how fine it must have been to owe so little. Debts, however, have ceased to worry me. I have decided that, like the poor, debts will have always with me. So I have settled down to a life of settling up and let come what may, including bill collectors.

I have reached a state of self-satisfaction where I refuse to let the ills of the day worry me. That popular song "Everything Will Be All Right" expresses my sentiments. There are only three things I ever worry about. And I really don't worry about them—I merely wonder. I wonder how long my appendix, my wife and teeth will remain with me. There may be a separation between myself and either of them at any time. But I don't let that worry me. Doctors say the appendix has no use. Teeth can be replaced with false teeth. And I'm egotistic enough to think I can get another wife. So "What Do I Care?"

On leaving the glad, bad ten years of my twenties, I find my outlook on life is different than it was a few years ago. I have seen so much of the insincere and sham, heard so much of the blab and balogna, that at thirty I find myself sitting in the seat of the scornful looking for flaws in human conduct. I'm sorry. I am hoping that I will merge from this period of doubting ere long and will again believe and trust everyone. It's great if you can do it. But it's hard on your pocketbook.

I have just learned that one of the men who was pointed out to me as an example of a real gentleman, when I was a boy, was all the time leading a secret life of shame. One of my best chums went to jail.

In my youth they told me Washington cut down the cherry tree and never told a lie. I have just learned they were spoofing me. They used to tell me my ancestors were worthless. Now, I am told people pay real money to see them in the Cincinnati zoo. I'm getting so I won't believe anyone but myself, and when I read the things I write, I doubt part of them. I'm at the point where I'm about convinced there is no Santa Claus and I wouldn't be at all surprised to learn that the story of Jack and the Bean Stalk is a myth.

At twenty I held my head high and strutted by when those along the highway gave me applause. I was eager for the glad hand. I craved fame. At thirty I am different.

A slap on the back won't buy shoes for the baby. The applause of my fellowmen won't pay my telephone bill. (Thanks, Mr. Cleaver, for not taking my phone out. I'll pay you early next week.) So now I go after the cold cash. And I find my stomach is better satisfied.

In my youth I thought only the Methodists amounted to anything. At thirty I know Catholics, Jews, Baptists and Presbyterians who are better than I am. I see some good in everyone. I enjoy poking fun at my competitors, but some of the best folks I know work on other papers. The finest real Christian gentleman I ever knew was a colored man.

I have much yet to learn. For instance, I have been studying why God created certain things. I've yet to find out why He made spinach and mosquitoes. By the time I am forty I hope to know. I've seen much of the world, but have yet to see a girl taking a bath in a tub filled with champagne. I was a member of a literary society in high school, but have never made a luncheon club. Life at thirty is great. I enjoy every day of it, because I make it amusing. I don't take it seriously. I face each day with the wonderment and thrill of a gambler who turns up four aces. Mark Twain has been dead many years, but I visit him, listen to him, and feel that I know him. Longfellow is my friend. When I tire of the dull routine, I immediately seek surcease among my friends, whether dead or living, and my soul is lifted. But more of this anon.

Pump on, old heart, pump on. And red blood to me give; It's not because I fear to die— It's because it's great to live.

WHO'S WHO AND WHAT'S HAPPENED

NANCY LARRABEE is living with her mother, VIRGINIA LELAND, in New York. Nancy's husband, an army officer, is stationed in the Philippines, and has left his wife behind. She believes that he cares mo. for another woman than he does for her. While visiting in the Bahama Islands Nancy falls in love with

BILL EWING, and returns to New York, planning to get a divorce and marry him. Her mother is much interested in

FRANK HARRISON, an elderly bachelor.

Nancy received word that Jim has died at sea.

TODAY'S INSTALLMENT

XL—"LIFE MUST GO ON"

FOR a moment I stood staring at the cablegram, too completely stunned to realize fully what it meant.

Jim had died at sea! Had died on his way back to me, returning so that we could straighten out our affairs. I told myself that if I had not written him that I wished to be free so that I could marry Bill Ewing, he would not have asked to be transferred to another regiment, so that he could come back to the States and see me. It was my fault, then, that he was dead.

I would have given anything in the world not to have asked him to let me be free. Anything, if it would have meant that he would live again. There was nothing that I could do, so way that I could find out just what had happened. My own helplessness maddened me. I walked the floor until I was worn out, and then sat down by the living-room window from which I could see the river and the bridges, and stared out into the misty night.

My own life seemed so useless, so artificial, that it disgusted me. I tried to remember Jim's devotion to Cecilia Eaton, to tell myself that he had been glad enough to go off to the Philippines without me. He hadn't wanted me alone. Then why should I torture myself with thoughts of my negligence in not going with him?

That didn't make it any easier. When I thought of Jim big, good-looking, happy Jim, lying dead, I cried out in horror. I couldn't let that be true, I told myself. It just couldn't be!

I tried to think that what I had done really hadn't mattered. I told myself that if Jim had really cared for me, he wouldn't have let my mother come between us. But in such cases one can't reason.

Morning came at last, and I got up and dragged myself into the bedroom. My lovely evening gown was wrinkled and bedraggled looking; my hair was tumbling into my eyes. I looked gaunt and weary. But as I looked into the mirror I told myself that that didn't matter. I didn't think of how I looked. My thoughts were all on Jim, my Jim, whom I'd never see again.

I changed my frock, almost mechanically, more for something to do than for any other reason. I remembered breakfast, but the thought of trying to eat was repugnant. I began walking about the bare, deserted apartment again.

The man who acted as superintendent of the building came upstairs at about ten o'clock, to get the keys. I had quite forgotten that that was the day when I was supposed to leave and go to a hotel. I gave the keys to him, and put on my hat and coat.

"I beg your pardon—but if something is the matter—if there's anything I can do—" he said.

"Nothing's the matter," I answered. My voice sounded to me as if it belonged to someone else.

The telephone rang just then, and I answered it. Nathalie's voice answered me when I said "Hello."

"Oh Nancy, I'm glad to find you in," she exclaimed. "Do have luncheon with me, won't you? I have so much to tell you. Bill's coming to New York next week; he says that he can't go any longer without seeing you!"

"I never want to see Bill again!" I answered, and hung up the receiver.

I told myself that it was Bill who had indirectly been the cause of Jim's death. If I hadn't thought I cared for him—if I hadn't asked Jim to let me divorce him—a dozen "ifs" flashed through my mind.

I went downstairs and hailed a taxi. I had made arrangements to go to one of the big hotels uptown, and the driver took me there so rapidly that when I arrived I was still in a daze.

As I registered a girl and a young man came up to the desk. A porter deposited some smart-looking bags, covered with foreign labels, beside them. The girl was laughing.

"Oh, I'm so excited over being home!" I heard her say. "Think of seeing everyone again, and going to the apartment; when do you suppose we can move in? I'll feel like an old married woman, instead of a bride, having my own home."

A bride and groom! Less than a year ago Jim and I had returned from our honeymoon, to settle down in he house on Governor's Island, and I was feeling like "an old married woman" then. Only it hadn't seemed like my own home because Virginia was there, to manage everything and make me feel that I was still just her daughter, instead of Jim's wife.

If only I could begin over again!

Tomorrow—The Shadow of Sorrow.

Nathalie's voice answered me.

FRANCHISE WILY BE CONSIDERED AGAIN WEDNESDAY NIGHT

Difficulties in reaching an agreement on the plans and specifications made a part of the ordinance granting the Dayton, Springfield and Xenia Southern Railway Co. a twenty-year renewal of its franchise into the city are expected to be ironed out at an adjourned meeting of City Commission Wednesday night.

Representatives of the company from Dayton have been invited by City Solicitor J. A. Finney to attend the recess meeting and present their objections to the specifications as drawn up by city engineers.

The specifications are made a part of the franchise ordinance and hold the traction people to an agreement to repair the street between the rails when the route formerly covered by the city street car on Detroit St. is torn up. They also protect the city in every conceivable way.

Protests of company officials held up passage of the ordinance on its second reading at the last commission meeting. This recess meeting has as its main object giving the company an opportunity to state its contentions in the matter.

CARL MAGEE WILL BE TRIED JUNE 14 ON MANSLAUGHTER CHARGE

LAS VEGAS, N. M., June 2—When Carl C. Magee, editor of the State Tribune at Albuquerque, goes on trial here June 14, charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of John B. Lassiter, state highway employee, the dingy little court room will be the center of a drama that for three years has centered about the "stormy petrel" of New Mexican journalism.

When Judge Luis Armijo calls the court to order, many of the figures that have passed back and forth in the dramatic scenes of former trials will again be represented in the proceedings.

Judge Armijo, elected in 1924 over Judge Leahy, was district attorney at the time Judge Leahy sent Magee to jail on contempt of court charges, in July, 1924. He did not, however, appear in the cases against Magee, Judge Leahy having appointed C. J. Roberts and O. O. Askren special prosecutors.

Leahy, always presiding in past trials, will appear this time as a witness. It was Leahy's alleged surprise attack on the editor which resulted in the accidental killing of Lassiter, who attempted to intervene and entered the

What common mistakes do you make?

Some master mind has risen to remark that it is the little things in life that count but most people buy things, mistreat them and then raise a loud cry that the articles were no good. It's human nature. For instance:

Too many people eat bananas that are not completely ripened. Too many people try to regulate their own watches with a penknife.

Too many blondes buy brunette rouge, and vice versa.
Too many men shave with dull razor blades.
Too many cooks burn fried eggs on the bottom.
Too many people don't follow the directions for washing fine silks.
Too many motorists forget to water their storage batteries.
Too many people can't open a new volume without breaking the binding.
Too many people think it nonsense to change steel phonograph records every time a record is played.

Too many people play approach shots with a spoon.
Too many smokers let fine cigars dry out.
Too many people use fountain pens with points unsuited to their handwriting.
Too many housekeepers use too much floor wax and try to polish before the wax is dry.

Too many people use a toothbrush horizontally instead of with a vertical or rotary motion.
These are some of the common mistakes made in using widely-advertised and simple products. This also offers the manufacturer one of his biggest problems for he spends thousands of dollars annually in educational advertising to instruct people in the right way to use his product. Instead they persist in misusing it.
However, it seems with all the mistakes made daily in simple matters the acquiring of an education in common acts is terribly complicated.

Manufacturers say that if you start a thing in the right way everything will be all right; you will acquire the habit of doing things the correct way and this habit will stick.

As the famous sprinters of the cinder tracks are wont to say, "It's all in the start."

In 1924, Judge Leahy sentenced the editor to three months in jail on three counts, contempt of court charges. It was in this trial that the editor became the object of judicial epithets. Magee spent two days in jail before habeas corpus proceedings placed him in jurisdiction of the supreme court which court upheld the power of the governor to issue a pardon for direct contempt.

The editor was bound to the San Miguel County court on bond of $10,000 furnished by Las Vegas citizens on a charge of manslaughter. The first charge preferred after the coroner's jury had made its findings was that of murder. The lesser charge was preferred when the district attorney filed his information.

BRIDGE REPAIRED FOLLOWING CAVE IN

Workmen under Milton Ireland, highway superintendent, repaired the Little Miami River bridge, Dayton and Xenia Pike, at Trebeins last night after a heavy truck caused a cave-in of flooring Tuesday afternoon.

Wood blocks in a space three or four feet long and two feet wide, and cross beams underneath, broke under the truck. Neighbors gardened the damaged section and notified County Surveyor W. J. Day's and Sheriff Morris Sharp, who investigated.

The broken section was on the north end of the bridge and on the west side. Traffic was able to continue east of the broken section.

THE BOBBED HAIR STORY

NOT many days ago we wrote an editorial in which we had occasion to take to task a minister in Kentucky who preached a sermon against women with bobbed hair.

The thing that brought the matter to attention was the fact that a girl who slapped his face after he had delivered his sermon was ordered to spend thirty days in jail.

Since then however the governor of Kentucky has seen fit to intervene and the sentence has been quashed.

We are not vindictive and believe that the matter ought to be dropped now. However if the minister is a man he will make some public utterance in which he admits that there may be good bobbed haired women, despite what he said a little while ago.

ONCE MORE IT'S MR. KOHLER

SO MR. KOHLER is going to use the law to fight the law.

The sheriff at Cleveland is not going to give prisoners the food ordered by the judges. Not at all. He has been making profit for himself by portioning out what have called 'starvation rations,' and as already pointed out by this newspaper has the law on his side.

Mr. Kohler is allowed so much per day for feeding prisoners. If he can feed them for less he is entitled to pocket the profit.

He has been doing this at the cost of prisoners' appetites.

Then some judges told him he had to stop profiteering and give better food. But Mr. Kohler now obtains an injunction which will for the time being enable him to disregard the order.

Why shouldn't Mr. Kohler keep on making profit if he can do so legally? Why should he consider the welfare of 'criminals'? From the humanitarian standpoint? Perhaps so.

But if he has to spend money electioneering in order to secure his office, it seems only logical to expect that he will reimburse himself for the sums he has expended in a public office, before he considers the appetites of offenders.

Perhaps Mr. Kohler has not yet been in office long enough to enable him to fully compensate for his election and political expenditures.

We hope that some method will be devised before long by which certain sheriffs are returned their campaign expenses upon election.

The Theatre

Governor Smith, of New York, has been suggested as "Czar" of the theater, as Judge Landis is of baseball and Will Hays of the screen. "Nothing quite so absurd has been proposed for some time," says Arthur Hornblow, editor in chief, Theatre Magazine. "Why pick on Governor Smith? Why not the Pope? Or Lloyd George?"

There is no need of a "Czar" in the theater, declares Mr. Hornblow, who goes on to point out that it was to get rid of the czar type of manager that the actors fought their splendid fight and won their independence. Only a few years ago certain arrogant managers used browbeating methods in their relations with artists. They foolishly imagined their exalted position as Broadway producers, their privilege as employers, gave them the right to tyrannize over their actors. They were taught their lesson and it was a bitter awakening for many.

"The Two Orphans" was recently revived at the Cosmopolitan Theatre, New York. The play was first seen in America in the Union Square Theatre, New York, December 21, 1874 and was an astounding success. Since those early days, theatergoers have become more sophisticated. Jaded palates demand more highly spiced food. To the average playgoer, to minds as yet unbalanced by morbid neuroses and psychological complexes, the old play still makes a potent appeal, according to Hornblow, famous critic. "Under the thin veneer of our modern cynicism we are still swayed by the elementary instincts and emotions," he says. We hope he's right.

William Fox, movie producer, has paid a million for a bunch of old Belasco successes, including "The Music Master," "The Auctioneer," "The Grand Army Man," "Return of Peter Grimm," "The Lily," "The Comedian." The following recent stage successes have been purchased by Fox alone: "What Price Glory," "Cradle Snatchers," "The Family Upstairs," "The Way Things Happen," "The Pelican," "Holy Terror," "Going Crooked," "Is Zat So?" "Whispering Wires," and "The Monkey Talks."

That sparkling musical-comedy, "Rose-Marie" which Xenians were favored by seeing in Dayton last winter, is to be recorded in the films, also, with Renee Adoree in the leading role. Filming of this picture, will hail the advent of a motion picture producer, Arthur Hammerstein. Mr. Hammerstein has produced numerous musical-comedies and "Rose-Marie" is one of them. He was offered $250,000 for the screen rights to the

TOMORROW'S MENU

Breakfast: Prunes, Cereal, Boiled Eggs, Coffee, Toast.

Luncheon: Baked Grapenuts Dish, Fruit Salad, Sugar Buns, Cocoa.

Dinner: Cold Sliced Beef, Pickles, Ham Timbales, Baked Macaroni, Lima Beans, Apple Betty, Coffee.

A Reader Friend, Mrs. L., has written: "What foods are served in timbale cases?"

To make Swedish Timbales: Beat two unseparated eggs, stir into them one cup of white flour mixed with a pinch of salt and one teaspoon of granulated sugar; add one-half cup of cold, sweet milk and one tablespoon of olive oil. Do not beat more than is necessary to mix these ingredients. The timbale iron must be heated in the kettle of deep fat then drained, wiped on clean paper, and dipped into the batter (which should be in a pitcher). Hold the iron in the batter till a coating of batter clings to it, then put it back into the hot fat and cook till crisp and light brown. Drain on crumpled paper and cool before filling.

These little crisp cases may be filled with Creamed Oysters, Creamed Chicken, Creamed Lobster, Creamed Sweetbreads, a combination of Chicken and Sweetbreads with Mushrooms, or simply the Creamed Chicken with the Mushrooms. Or the cases may be filled with ripe strawberries, sprinkled with powdered sugar and topped with a tiny dab of whipped cream, as a dessert. At a formal dinner Swedish tim-oven, and bakes twenty minutes. Turn the little timbales out of the moulds (after making sure that it is "set" like a custard) and serve with white sauce, tomato sauce, or peas. Here is an excellent recipe for this order:

Ham Timbales: Cook one and one-half cups of dry bread crumbs in one and one-fourth cups of sweet milk till a paste is formed. Add this to two cups of minced cooked ham, stirring in two egg yolks, salt and pepper to taste, and then folding in two egg-whites which have been stiffly beaten. Oil the timbale moulds and cook as above directed.

MUCH GAS FOUND NEAR CAMBRIDGE

CAMBRIDGE, O., June 2.—Approximately 20,000,000 cubic feet of gas production was drilled in within forty-eight hours between here and New Concord, it was stated here.

All of the wells have been struck in the Niagara sand at a depth of 3300 feet. One of the producers is giving off 3,500,000 feet daily without being shot.

Direction of development indicates that the field extends beneath this city. Prospects for leasing town lots are said to be bright in the western section of the city at least.

Every well drilled to the Niagara has yielded gas. The wells are situated along the National road and are attracting attention of tourists, some of whom are remaining in this vicinity to lease land.

Drillers and other oil field employees are becoming numerous in this district.

SIDELIGHTS

ON Greene County History

OATS, RYE, BARLEY, BUCKWHEAT.

Oats has been raised practically from the beginning of the county's history.

As early as 1840 the county produced 157,668 bushels, which, according to census figures for that year, had a gross value of $23,864, or about fifteen cents per bushel. In 1850 the government census returned the oat and rye crop together, giving the county credit for 128,772 bushels.

Oats has been a staple crop from the earliest days, and is still grown by practically every farmer in the county. It is a grain which responds readily to commercial fertilizer and for this reason has enjoyed a good yield with little increase in the acreage sown. In 1916 the county reported 275,574 bushels, Ross Twp., with a yield of 53,914 bushels, leading in the amount raised.

Rye has never been extensively grown in the county for its grain, although many farmers have raised it as a forage crop. The first definite report on rye was in 1840 when 12,006 bushels with a value of $5,000 was produced.

Barley has been grown even less than rye. The census report of 1840 makes no return of barley, while in 1850 there were only 1,373 bushels reported. For several years the farmers of the county have been growing both winter and spring barley, with the former having the largest acreage.

Buckwheat was formerly grown by most of the farmers of the county, although most of them had only a small patch of it. In the early days of the county, it was grown for the pancake value of the grain, but in these days home-grown pancake flour is practically a thing of the past. In 1850 there were 2,735 bushels of buckwheat reported for the county, but this evidently did not include the small yield of hundreds of the small patches of the county which the farmers did not think it necessary to return to the assessor.

GIRLS, WHITEN SKIN WITH LEMON JUICE

The only harmless way to bleach the skin white is to mix the juice of two lemons with three ounces of Orchard White, which any druggist will supply for a few cents. Shake well in a bottle, and you have a whole quarter-pint of the most wonderful skin whiteners, softener and beautifier. Massage this sweetly fragrant, lemon bleach into the face, neck, arms and hands. It can not irritate. Famous stage beauties use it to bring that clear, youthful skin and rosy-white complexion also as a freckle, sunburn and tan bleach. You must mix this remarkable lotion yourself. It can not be bought ready to use because it acts best immediately after it is prepared.

IF YOU KNOW

The trouble with a large part of this world is that it doesn't know. When you know, you are able to appreciate, you see all sides, you measure accurately, you sense values quickly, you appraise as you go along.

People who know are slow to anger, patient, tolerant, and magnanimous when to be so means greatness.

If you know, you will not say the word that might sink deep into someone else's heart and make that heart bleed with hurt.

If you know, you will walk through crowds and still be above that crowd in poise, pride and power. You will be at home with those who are both below and above you.

If you know, you will cover up your bitterness and take your wounds into a silent place and there dress them so that healing may set in quickly.

If you know, you will not mind the rough words and the selfish sneers of the ignorant.

He who thinks, who learns from everything and everybody, who finds nothing mean or base in the elemental heart of the world, and who serves whenever and wherever he can, regardless of favor or reward—he alone is intelligent.

He impresses upon each juror that he must know and be sure that he knows and that what he knows must be facts that are indisputable.

If you know yourself, never mind what other people may say or think. For by knowing yourself thoroughly you learn to know all men.

Two Women Find Health Essential to Happiness

MRS. BELLE THOMPSON ROUTE 2, ROSSVILLE, GEORGIA

"My mother-in-law," says Mrs. Belle Thompson, Route 2, Rossville, Ga., "told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash. I took six bottles of the Vegetable Compound. I could sleep and would get up in the morning singing and feeling fine. I am the mother of three children, and always after the babies came I had to take treatments, but I can truly say that this last time I have only used the Sanative Wash. It does more good than the treatments. It keeps me on my feet to care for my children and I do most of my work. I feel it my duty to let you know how both of the medicines have helped me."

Another Happy Woman

Decatur, Illinois.—"I took your medicine for weakness. I would sometimes have to hold myself up with my hands. I was this way for five years, off and on. I read in the newspapers where Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had helped a lot of women, and I thought I would take it. I am now getting better so fast that every month I can feel a difference. My work now is cooking. If you like, you may use these facts as a testimonial. I am willing to help you boost your medicine."—Mrs. Irene Ratz, 625 Greenwood Ave., Decatur, Ill.

MODISH MITZI—Maybe Mitzi Inherited Her Extravagance BY J. V. JAY

Dad is giving Mitzi one of his famous economy lectures. No matter how many he gives her he will always have one left. Mitzi is out to convince him that the coat with the fitted yoke is not expensive considering the workmanship and Dad must see for himself how smart it is.

It was really very inconvenient for this package to arrive, not to say embarrassing. Dad has lost his voice and his words. He only has looks left—some very mean ones. They do not seem to be softened by the attractive black crepe gown with the jabot and sleeve effect so finely pleated.

"But I must show you, Dad," says Mitzi, taking the bull by the horns as it were. "I must show you how really practical I am. This coat was so reasonable." Dad doesn't look as if he could be reasoned with. The coat is taffeta, straight in line and with a stand-up collar. It's becoming to Mitzi, of course.

"Not only was it reasonable," continues Mitzi, "but it is reversible," demonstrates the scolded child. It is lined with Scotch plaid woolen lining, and can be worn taffeta or plaid side out. Well, of course, Mitzi is extravagant but she's clever, too. And after all, well, thinks Dad, she does take after her mother, so it ended amicably.

GEORGE M'MANUS, FAMOUS CREATOR OF JIGGS, REPLIES TO CRITICISM OF CARTOON COMICS

By GEORGE M'MANUS
No I have never been to college. Neither has Jiggs although he speaks Spanish, Italian, Portuguese, Danish, Norwegian, Japanese and Polish—with the aid of a translator. I started drawing when a boy and was in New York doing comics for the New York World at twenty-one. Jiggs, according to the biography for him a year or two ago, married young and spent so much money replacing fractured rolling pins, pulverized crockery and glassware that he could never afford an education. I heartily approve of a university

NATIONAL LEAGUE PLAYS FASTER IS FOUND BY CLOCKERS

NEW YORK, June 1.—Housewives in the Bronx are forced to wait later dinners during the summer than are housewives in Harlem—that is, if you grant that the husbands from those two sections are the ones who patronize, respectively, the ball games played at the Yankee Stadium and at the Polo Grounds.

There is no doubt that the Giants play their games on an average of from 15 to 30 minutes more quickly than do the Yanks, and the same holds true for all of the National League clubs as compared with the teams in the Junior circuit.

Probably the reason for the lack of speed in the American League is that the umpires work under different instructions than those handed out by President Heydler in the National League. At any rate the teams are given a longer period to make a change in pitchers and the hurlers themselves are allowed more latitude with the clock.

The club which is the worst offender undoubtedly is Detroit, for the Tigers seldom finish a game in less than two hours. Ty Cobb, the perennial manager, is largely responsible for this. His willingness to argue on every debatable point and his frequent manipulation of pitchers and pinch hitters consume many minutes every game, and the fans seem to resent the dilatory tactics.

The Tigers recently played a four-game series here in which eleven of the games took more than two hours and fifteen minutes to complete and one went three hours and seven minutes. In their first twenty games this year the Tigers needed more than two hours in fourteen encounters. The Chicago White Sox, probably the speediest team in the American league, used up more than two hours in only six games and two of those were with the Tigers.

From the standpoint of good business procedure, it would seem that the American League managers would petition Ban Johnson to order his umpires to speed up the games. Even a slugfest can be played in comparatively short time if both clubs are on their toes and are forced to play without unnecessary interruptions. One of the speediest games the Yanks have played this year was a 13 to 9 affair with Cleveland. The rain of baseballs kept the fans interested, because between each hit the pitchers didn't toss three or four throws to first.

Of course, the winning team is the one that draws the crowd, but it may stand as a truism that the teams at the head of the league usually are the ones which waste the least time in playing their games.

education and have done my bit by putting Jiggs' daughter, Nora, through college. As a result she is the fearless young intellectual of the family and an ambidextrous as it has never brought her any-thing. Maggie has had voice culture but I cannot recommend that, thing but an outworn shoe—and that cost Jiggs broken window, through which it passed in transit.

If I had been to college doubtless I could have invested "Bringing Up Father" with a psychological setting from Freud or Jung—thus insuring myself an intermittent mention in the suppressed magazines. Jiggs might be given a complex of some sort (in addition, of course, to the inferiority complex which he now possesses—the fracture of strength of his skull being inferior to the pounding strength of the ordinary household rolling pin). Certain critics have actually detected a trace of philosophy in my work—something which I assuredly never put in myself. One, a certain Patrick Kearney writing for Vanity Fair, has dubbed me a pessimist. His article was entitled "The Pessimism of the Comic Strip" with the sub title "The Funny Papers Considered as National, Social and Psychological Documents." Since the article leads off with a picture of mine and later alludes to me as one of the cartoonists whose work deals with married life "in its lowest level of painfulness." I have read it a half dozen times.

I have been so long in the laugh-making business myself that a writer has to step some to blast an honest-to-goodness belt-snapping roof-lifting laugh out of me. But my hat is off to Patrick Kearney, psychologist and enthusiastic young intellectual. May his writing arm retain to the end its fresh young vigor and flexibility.

Patrick takes his comics with ponderous and mastodontic seriousness, not to say with profound and melancholy misgivings. He says: "There is no such thing as a happy ending in the comics. If happiness appears in them at all, it is always immediately afterward shown to be based on misconception, and served only the dramatic purpose of heightening the miserable and unhappy culmination."

"In all of these comics the things which are represented as funny are the things which in life are considered heart-breaking. We can scarcely parallel it in all literature, save in the terrible plays of Strindberg and in the writings of the more sombre of the Russians. (It is good to know that you profess having read Strindberg and the more sombre Russian, Patrick.)

"We are neither amused nor repelled," continues this authority on the more sombre Russians, "by a misrepresentation unless we find in it some truth about ourselves or about our life, and we cannot avoid the conclusion that the life depicted in the comic papers is a mirror of the life actually led by those who read and enjoy them. The mirror may distort and disguise and exaggerate but it is a mirror and a fundamentally truthful one. It is a curious but familiar trick of human psychology that we can enjoy seeing a mirrored representation of the things we flee from in life."

These are his exact words. At this point by the fourth or fifth time I read the article, I was able to make out that Mr. Kearney was not picking on us comic artists but on life. Kearney goes on to support with evidence from the comics the general proposition that: "The conclusions concerning the failure of our civilization to give happiness and peace to the majority are unavoidable. The comics, flooding the homes of the land every Sunday morning, give mocking testimony of the falsity of the platitudes preached that very morning from the pulpits."

I suppose my sympathy will be no great consolation to Kearney, but he has it, I am deeply moved to sympathy every time I find a man named Kearney, or O'Reilly or McManus worrying about our civilization or our pulpits, or about the attraction of gravitation, or about our Niagara Falls, or our differential calculus, or our anything. All he has to do is change them—if he can. Kearney doesn't present any plan. But none of them do.

I discover that he crawls through the trench dug out by several thousand previous critics of everything from mathematics to comics—he means to criticize life, which is mirrored in the comic strip, but is unable to find the foundation of his subject.

It has always been my contention that a comic strip should primarily be funny. The average reader finds enough in our newspapers to be sad about. There are new wars; gangster perils; attempts to tie the international knot, invariably ending in a granny; reports of an alarming increase in the number of college graduates and so on. Consequently the average man is in need of some sort of humorous food to brighten him up into feeling equal to the daily wrestle with his work. I like to feel that "Bringing Up Father" is a high-candle power contribution to that brightening for it fits the comic into a certain niche and makes the drawing of it take on the characteristics of service. Consequently I try first of all to always keep the comic funny.

I usually don't feel funny when I'm drawing Jiggs—a fact that, as a moment's consideration will prove, is essential to my remaining outside of the boundaries of an insane asylum. Drawing comics takes up about 85 per cent of my time and it is obviously impossible for anyone outside of an asylum to feel and act funny such a proportion of his living time with the possible exception of the comedian of a fraternity group. He is the boy I envy.

JOSEPH HUTCHISON SEEKS NOMINATION

Joseph T. Hutchison, Beaver-creek Twp. farmer, has filed his declaration of candidacy for the Republican nomination for county treasurer subject to the primary August 10, with the board of elections.

Mr. Hutchison was a candidate for treasurer several years ago, but was defeated for the nomination.

His declaration for this office is the second to be filed with the election board. Sheriff Morris Sharp officially announced last week.

According to rumors five other prospective candidates are preparing to announce for the office of county treasurer before the time limit for filing expires, June 11.

PREVAILING PRICES ALLOW XENIA WOMEN TO KEEP PRETTY CHEAPLY IS LEARNED

While figures show that each woman in the nation spends an average of nearly a dollar a day to make herself attractive, Xenia women are holding their beauty at a much cheaper price. Seven dollars a week for purposes of beauty is a fair figure in Chicago and other

American cities, according to Paul Rillings, former president of the Chicago and Illinois Hairdressers Association.

He figures a shampoo at $1.00, tonic rub at fifty cents, marcel wave at $1.50, facial massage at $2.00, manicure at $1.00 and eyebrow arch at $1.00.

Xenia women can get a shampoo and tonic together for $1.00, marcel at $1.00, "facial" at $1.00, manicure at seventy-five cents and eyebrow arch at fifty cents. And who will dare to say Xenia women are not as beautiful as Chicago or those of other cities?

What price beauty? Government statistics show that American women spent $30,000,000 a day for beautification. This enormous sum does not include clothes or high priced silk hose, but merely cosmetics and the hundred and one things that a woman can have done to her in a beauty parlor. The operations mentioned do not include all a beauty shop will perform in the interests of loveliness. Creams of all kinds may be applied, hair may be cut and dressed, permanent waves at $15 each may be given and various electric treatments are offered. If a woman's face does not suit her taste, she may even go to a plastic surgeon and have it remodeled. But she can't enjoy Xenia prices in this operation.

There are, however, many women who seldom enter a beauty parlor except for some special occasion, but who spend large sums of money on home treatments.

When a woman arises in the morning she puts a cream on her face as a powder base. Then comes powder, then rouge, and more powder to "tone down" the rouge. Lipstick is then applied and a little eyebrow pencil may be added. A few whiffs of perfume, a bit of some oil on the permanent wave and milady is "fixed."—for a short time at least. Other creams may be added through out the day, to prevent chafing, sunburn, etc.

All these preparations cost money. The shelves of the ordinary drug store are loaded with all sorts of beauty helps and whole pages of advertising are written about various preparations, from soap to electric vibrators.

The Xenia woman prizes her beauty and with good reason, for it costs her much in time and money to maintain it!

TREASURER VISITS TOWNS NEXT WEEK

County Treasurer Frank A. Jackson announces that collection of the June half of 1925 taxes for accommodation of taxpayers outside the city will begin at certain banks in the various villages Monday.

Another announcement was made by Treasurer Jackson Wednesday in the nature of a warning to cigarette dealers. A few merchants have failed to pay their cigarette tax and the treasurer warns the last day to do so is June 20, after which all delinquents are subject to a penalty of $100.

This is a state law and no extension of time will be given, he declared.

ANTIOCH DEFEATS SPRINGFIELD NINE

Maclean hurled brilliantly and Antioch College batted out a 20 to 1 victory over the Springfield Pirates Tuesday afternoon at Yellow Springs.

For four innings the game was closely fought but Craig, Pirate hurler, weakened in the fifth and Antioch scored eighteen runs in the last four innings.

Maclean limited the Pirates to six scattered safeties and was accorded good support in the field. Coach Earl E. Pugh's boys enjoyed a batting spree hammering out fifteen hits and scored at least once in every inning but the first and second.

Clifton lost to Antioch last Saturday 16 to 2.

The college nine will meet the Springfield Dairy Products team on the Yellow Springs diamond next Saturday.

The score:

Pirates 0001000000 1 6 5

Antioch 00113357x 20 151

They say I'm "fussy"

WELL, let that go. I'm ready to admit that so far as pipe tobacco is concerned, I've got ideas. And if insisting on a tobacco that won't bite the tongue or parch the throat is "being fussy," you can write "guilty" alongside my name, and I won't even appeal the charge.

I can't speak for anybody else, but personally I smoke for pleasure! So I smoke Prince Albert. I'll say I do. Right after breakfast, on up until I switch off the light for the night. Pipe-load after pipe-load. Day after day. Prince Albert treats my tongue as gently as a mother handles a brand-new baby.

They tell me it's the Prince Albert process that cuts out bite and parch. Fair enough. I'll testify before the well-known world that P. A. is the coolest, sweetest, most genuinely friendly smoke a fellow can get on this planet. You suspect that the minute you throw back the hinged lid on the tidy red tin and get a whiff of real tobacco.

Now, I'm telling you to be fussy about your smoking. Many a pipe-smoker has fooled himself when he should have been soothing himself with P. A. I say it pays to be fussy about anything that means so much to a man. What do you think?

—no other tobacco is like it!

P. A. is sold everywhere in tidy red tins, pound and half-pound tin humidors, and pound crystal-glass humidors with sponge-moistener top. And always with every bit of bite and parch removed by the Prince Albert process.

Novel Midseason, Early Fall Trends May Be Noted

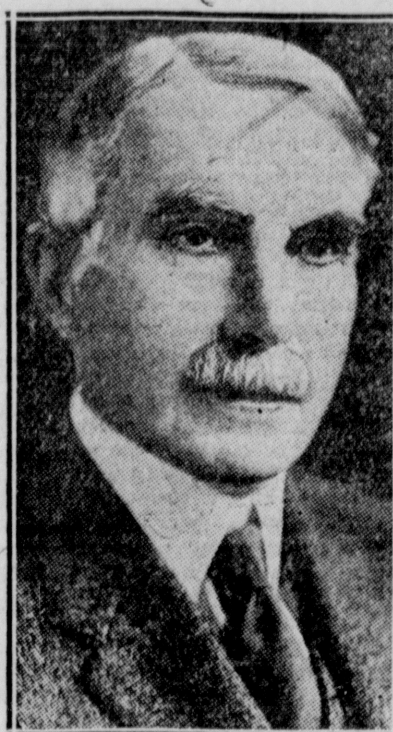

Novelties for midseason wear are numerous in the shop showings. A colorful crepe wrap for summer (left above) is devised from an ingenious scarf with cape attached. Black and white checked taffeta is fashioned into an original dance frock (center). It is finely plaited with skirt trimmings of gay Roman stripes, and black lace and patent leather belt to complete the costume. As suggesting the early fall trends is the dress model (right). The material is taupe bengaline with white crepe collar and deep panel of crepe. Gathered, side panels are featured and it is noticeable that long, tight sleeves are retained.

STATE ENGINEER TO VISIT BRYAN FARM SPORTSMEN LEARN

Assurance was given in two letters read from State Agricultural Director Charles V. Trux at the monthly meeting of the Greene County Fish and Game Protective Association Tuesday night that a state engineer and a representative of the state forestry department would inspect the John Bryan farm near Yellow Springs within fifteen days.

The survey will be made to determine what advantages it presents as the probable site for the next fish hatchery and game preserve to be established in Ohio.

The two state officials are now engaged in launching a hatchery at Piqua and their services will not be available for about two weeks. They have received instructions, however, to proceed immediately to Greene County once their work at Piqua is finished, according to the letters.

A delegation of Greene County sportsmen intend to accompany the state men on the inspection trip.

Members also appointed a committee at the Tuesday meeting to decide upon a site for the annual all-day picnic and frolic in August. No date was definitely set but it is tentatively planned to hold the picnic at the Bryan farm if this can be arranged.
